How It Works

The Scarecrow quietly waits until it detects an unwanted animal, then it instantly releases a short, but effective pulsating stream of water at full garden hose pressure. The combination of sudden noise, movement and water frightens animals away.

Economical

When triggered, Scarecrow blasts water for only 3 seconds - about 2 to 3 cups for each trigger. It then waits for 7 seconds, to allow the animal to clear the detection area, and resets for the next intruding animal. One 9-volt battery can operate the sensor and the high flow valve for thousands of activations (6 months under normal use).

Works Day or Night

The high quality motion/heat sensor has an effective detection range of 35 feet. Because it detects heat as well as motion, the Scarecrow is effective at night as well as during the day. During daylight hours the optics automatically reduce sensitivity to help avoid false triggering.

Easy To Use

Scarecrow is easy to use, relocate and store. Complete installation and adjustment instructions are provided with each Scarecrow. The flow through water design allows more than one Scarecrow on one garden hose. A universal mounting bracket is available if the Scarecrow needs to be mounted to a structural surface.
